CEO's Message

“Supplier dependability and adaptability are key to maintaining our current energy system and to building California’s future energy network.”

California’s energy system depends on a vast network of suppliers to support the delivery of safe, affordable, and reliable energy today, and to be ready for tomorrow. To serve customers and operate efficiently, SoCalGas does business with thousands of suppliers, and the economic impact of this spending benefits local cities, towns, and neighborhoods.

In 2025 SoCalGas spent $2.44 billion with suppliers overall, and $1.08 billion with suppliers who fulfill the California Public Utilities Commission’s (CPUC) goals under General Order 156. This represents 44.15% of our total spend, exceeding the CPUC’s goal for this metric for the 33rd year. Almost 80% of the suppliers we work with are located in California, and that large proportion of in-state spending boosts economic activity up and down the Golden State.

Supplier dependability and adaptability are key to maintaining our current energy system and to building California’s future energy network. Supply chains often face challenges from global forces and local events, which is why our company invests in outreach to find new suppliers and maintain outstanding relationships with the ones we already work with.

As I look back on 2025 and to the years ahead, it is clear how significantly suppliers — as core parts of our value chain — contributed to many of our achievements.

To meet California’s energy challenges, we’re always improving the customer experience, always working to operate efficiently, and always keeping safety as the foundation of everything we do. Our outstanding supplier network helps make that possible.

ANNUAL REPORT

Looking ahead, we recognize significant potential for small, local, and diverse suppliers in transformative sectors such as clean renewable hydrogen, renewable natural gas, and critical energy infrastructure.

9.1.1 PROGRAM ACTIVITIES

INTERNAL ACTIVITIES

Corporate Commitment

In alignment with CPUC's General Order 156, we continued our procurement activities with diverse businesses, and provided technical assistance support for their long-term growth. In 2025, our outreach and engagement efforts resulted in contracts with 565 DBEs, totaling $1.08 billion in direct and indirect spend - with 44.15% awarded to diverse suppliers. This underscores our commitment to local economic development.

We remain committed to advancing supplier diversity through targeted education, technical assistance, and strategic partnerships, equipping small, local, and diverse suppliers with tools to compete, contribute, and thrive within our supply chain.

Our leadership is fully engaged in raising awareness and developing strategies to increase participation in areas that have been historically underrepresented.

Together, we are building an inclusive procurement ecosystem that supports safe, reliable, and affordable energy delivery for all Californians today and prepares us for tomorrow's challenges.

"Our commitment to supplier diversity is central to how we deliver infrastructure projects. By integrating small, local, and diverse businesses into pipeline and infrastructure modernization and safety initiatives, we foster innovation, build resilient communities, and uphold our mission to provide safe, reliable, and affordable energy. These partnerships reflect our belief that diversity drives progress and strengthens the energy future for Southern California."
